

Looking through

Q3 CPI preview

- We expect a 0.8% rise in the September quarter CPI, which would see annual inflation ease to 5.0%.
- Seasonal increases in food, local body rates and alcohol to be the main contributors.
- The RBNZ will continue to look through this year's spike in headline inflation and focus on global developments.

Summary

We estimate that consumer prices rose 0.8% in the September quarter, led by seasonal increase in food prices and housing costs, slightly offset by lower fuel prices. This would see annual inflation fall to 5.0%, from a 21-year high of 5.3% in June. Our pick is similar to the Reserve Bank's estimate of 0.7% qtr, 4.9% annual.

We suspect the CPI will have little influence on the tone of next Thursday's OCR review, which will focus more on global uncertainties. The high headline inflation rate won't rattle the RBNZ – its preferred measure of 'core' inflation sat at 2.3% in June, though that may rise in September. The RBNZ has also taken the view that inflation expectations will moderate once the spike in annual inflation passes. That assumption won't be put to the test until early next year, once last year's GST hike (which added around 2 percentage points to annual inflation) has dropped out.

Details

We expect the largest quarterly contributions to come from:

Food (+0.4ppts): A relatively large seasonal increase in fresh produce, although prices eased back in the September month.

Housing and utilities (+0.3ppts): Mostly due to the annual changes in local body rates, with some moderate increases in rents and building costs as well.

Alcohol and tobacco (+0.2ppts): The annual increase in alcohol excise, which is indexed to headline inflation.

Private transport (-0.2ppts): Petrol prices were 3% lower on average over the quarter.

Consumer Price Index

The effects of the Canterbury earthquakes may be apparent in some of the details, though perhaps not large enough to stand out at the aggregate level. The most likely impact will be through building materials, where global forces have already been pushing prices higher over the last year. Rents have risen slightly faster in the last two quarters, with a quake-induced reduction in supply in Christchurch coming on top of an emerging housing shortage elsewhere. Some councils have announced large rates increases for the next year, citing higher insurance costs, although the average increase looks comparable to previous years. Dwelling insurance has a weight of just 0.2% in the index, so even a 50% hike in premiums as some have suggested would only add 0.1ppts to inflation, possibly spread over several quarters.

This release will incorporate the three-yearly update of the CPI weights, to account for changes in household spending patterns. The most notable change is an increase in the weighting of food, with prices rising by more than the broader CPI basket over the last few years (and limited substitution effects). Since food prices are highly seasonal, this will make the quarterly CPI slightly more volatile, and accounts for 0.1ppts of the 0.8% increase that we expect for the September quarter.

Dominick Stephens, Chief Economist, Ph: (64-9) 336 5671

Michael Gordon, Senior Economist, Ph: (64-9) 336 5670

For further information, questions or comments contact Dominick Stephens, telephone (09) 336 5671, email dominick_stephens@westpac.co.nz

For all clients: Westpac Institutional Bank is a division of Westpac Banking Corporation ABN 33 007 457 141, incorporated in Australia ("Westpac"). The information contained in this report: does not constitute an offer, or a solicitation of an offer, to subscribe for or purchase any securities or other financial instrument; does not constitute an offer, inducement or solicitation to enter a legally binding contract; and is not to be construed as an indication or prediction of future results. The information is general and preliminary information only and while Westpac has made every effort to ensure that information is free from error, Westpac does not warrant the accuracy, adequacy or completeness of the Information. The Information may contain material provided directly by third parties and while such material is published with necessary permission, Westpac accepts no responsibility for the accuracy or completeness of any such material. In preparing the Information, Westpac has not taken into consideration the financial situation, investment objectives or particular needs of any particular investor and recommends that investors seek independent advice before acting on the Information. Certain types of transactions, including those involving futures, options and high yield securities give rise to substantial risk and are not suitable for all investors. Except where contrary to law, Westpac intends by this notice to exclude liability for the information. The information is subject to change without notice. Westpac expressly prohibits you from passing on this document to any third party. Westpac Banking Corporation is registered in England as a branch (branch number BR000106) and is authorised and regulated by The Financial Services Authority. Westpac Europe Limited is a company registered in England (number 05660023) and is authorised and regulated by The Financial Services Authority. © 2011 For Australian clients: WARNING – This document is provided to you solely for your own use and in your capacity as a wholesale client of Westpac.